Students Visit National Supply Get Top Score At Missile Site

A recent visit of nine top students from Torrance's three high schools to the National Supply Co. proved a good educational program, Assistant Superintendent Albert Posner reported to the Board of Education last week.

Under the program, the nine boys spent three afternoons at the National Supply facilities, talking to top officials and watching plant operations at first hand. They were given problems to solve, based on what they found out.

Making the study were Gordon Eggum, Howard Borer and Mike Sims, North High; George Cobabe, Gary Hand and David McGuire, South High; and Tom Coleman, Don Cannon and David Nelson, Torrance High. They were selected on the basis of their grades and on the recommendations of their teachers.

CONSULTING with the students at National Supply were Clinton Cooke, general superintendent, fabrication; William R. Patterson, general superintendent, steel; Philip J. Bauer, chief chemist; Todd Gardner, plant metallurgist; John T. Evans Jr., melting superintendent; Allan H. Freedman, research metallurgist; Melvin G. Gunn, maintenance superintendent; Walter B. Levy, supervising research metallur-

The first National Guard Nike firing battery to complete annual service practice at the Red Canyon Missile Range at Fort Bliss recently returned to its site in Torrance holding the highest ASP score attained this year in the Los Angeles Army Air Defense Command.

The Torrance unit scored three successful firings and an unofficial total of 2802 out of a possible 3000 points in the first annual shoot by National Guard troops at the testing range. Their score is also the year's fourth highest among all Army missile batteries on the west coast in the 6th Region, Army Air Defense Command.

Commander of the Torrance site, Battery B, 44th Missile Battalion, 251st Artillery, is Capt. Jack M. Daniels.

gist; Henry J. Moreau, electrical engineer; and Jackson R. Nichols, research metallurgist.
